The Supreme Court of the United States announced a 4-4 decision in US vs. Texas. What does this mean for immigrant families?

While we are still teasing out the many implications of this decision, which keeps Deferred Action for Parents of Americans (DAPA) and expansions to Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA+) on hold, one thing is clear:

DACA, as it was established by President Obama in 2012, is still in place, and you can still apply today.
